Scooby-Doo and the gang visit a museum. They walk into the Main Hall, but it's surprisingly quiet. Shaggy says, "Like, where are all the people? This place feels more like a graveyard than a museum."

Two men approach the gang. The older man says, "Hi, I'm Mr. Mason, and I run the museum. This is my assistant, Rob."

"Why is the museum so empty, Mr. Mason?" asks Fred.

"People have seen monsters in there," replies Mr. Mason, showing them the hallways. "Now nobody comes to visit. I'm going to have to close down soon."

"Like, maybe we should visit a museum that doesn't have monsters," says Shaggy. "All those in favor of leaving, raise your hand." Shaggy raises a hand and Scooby raises a paw.

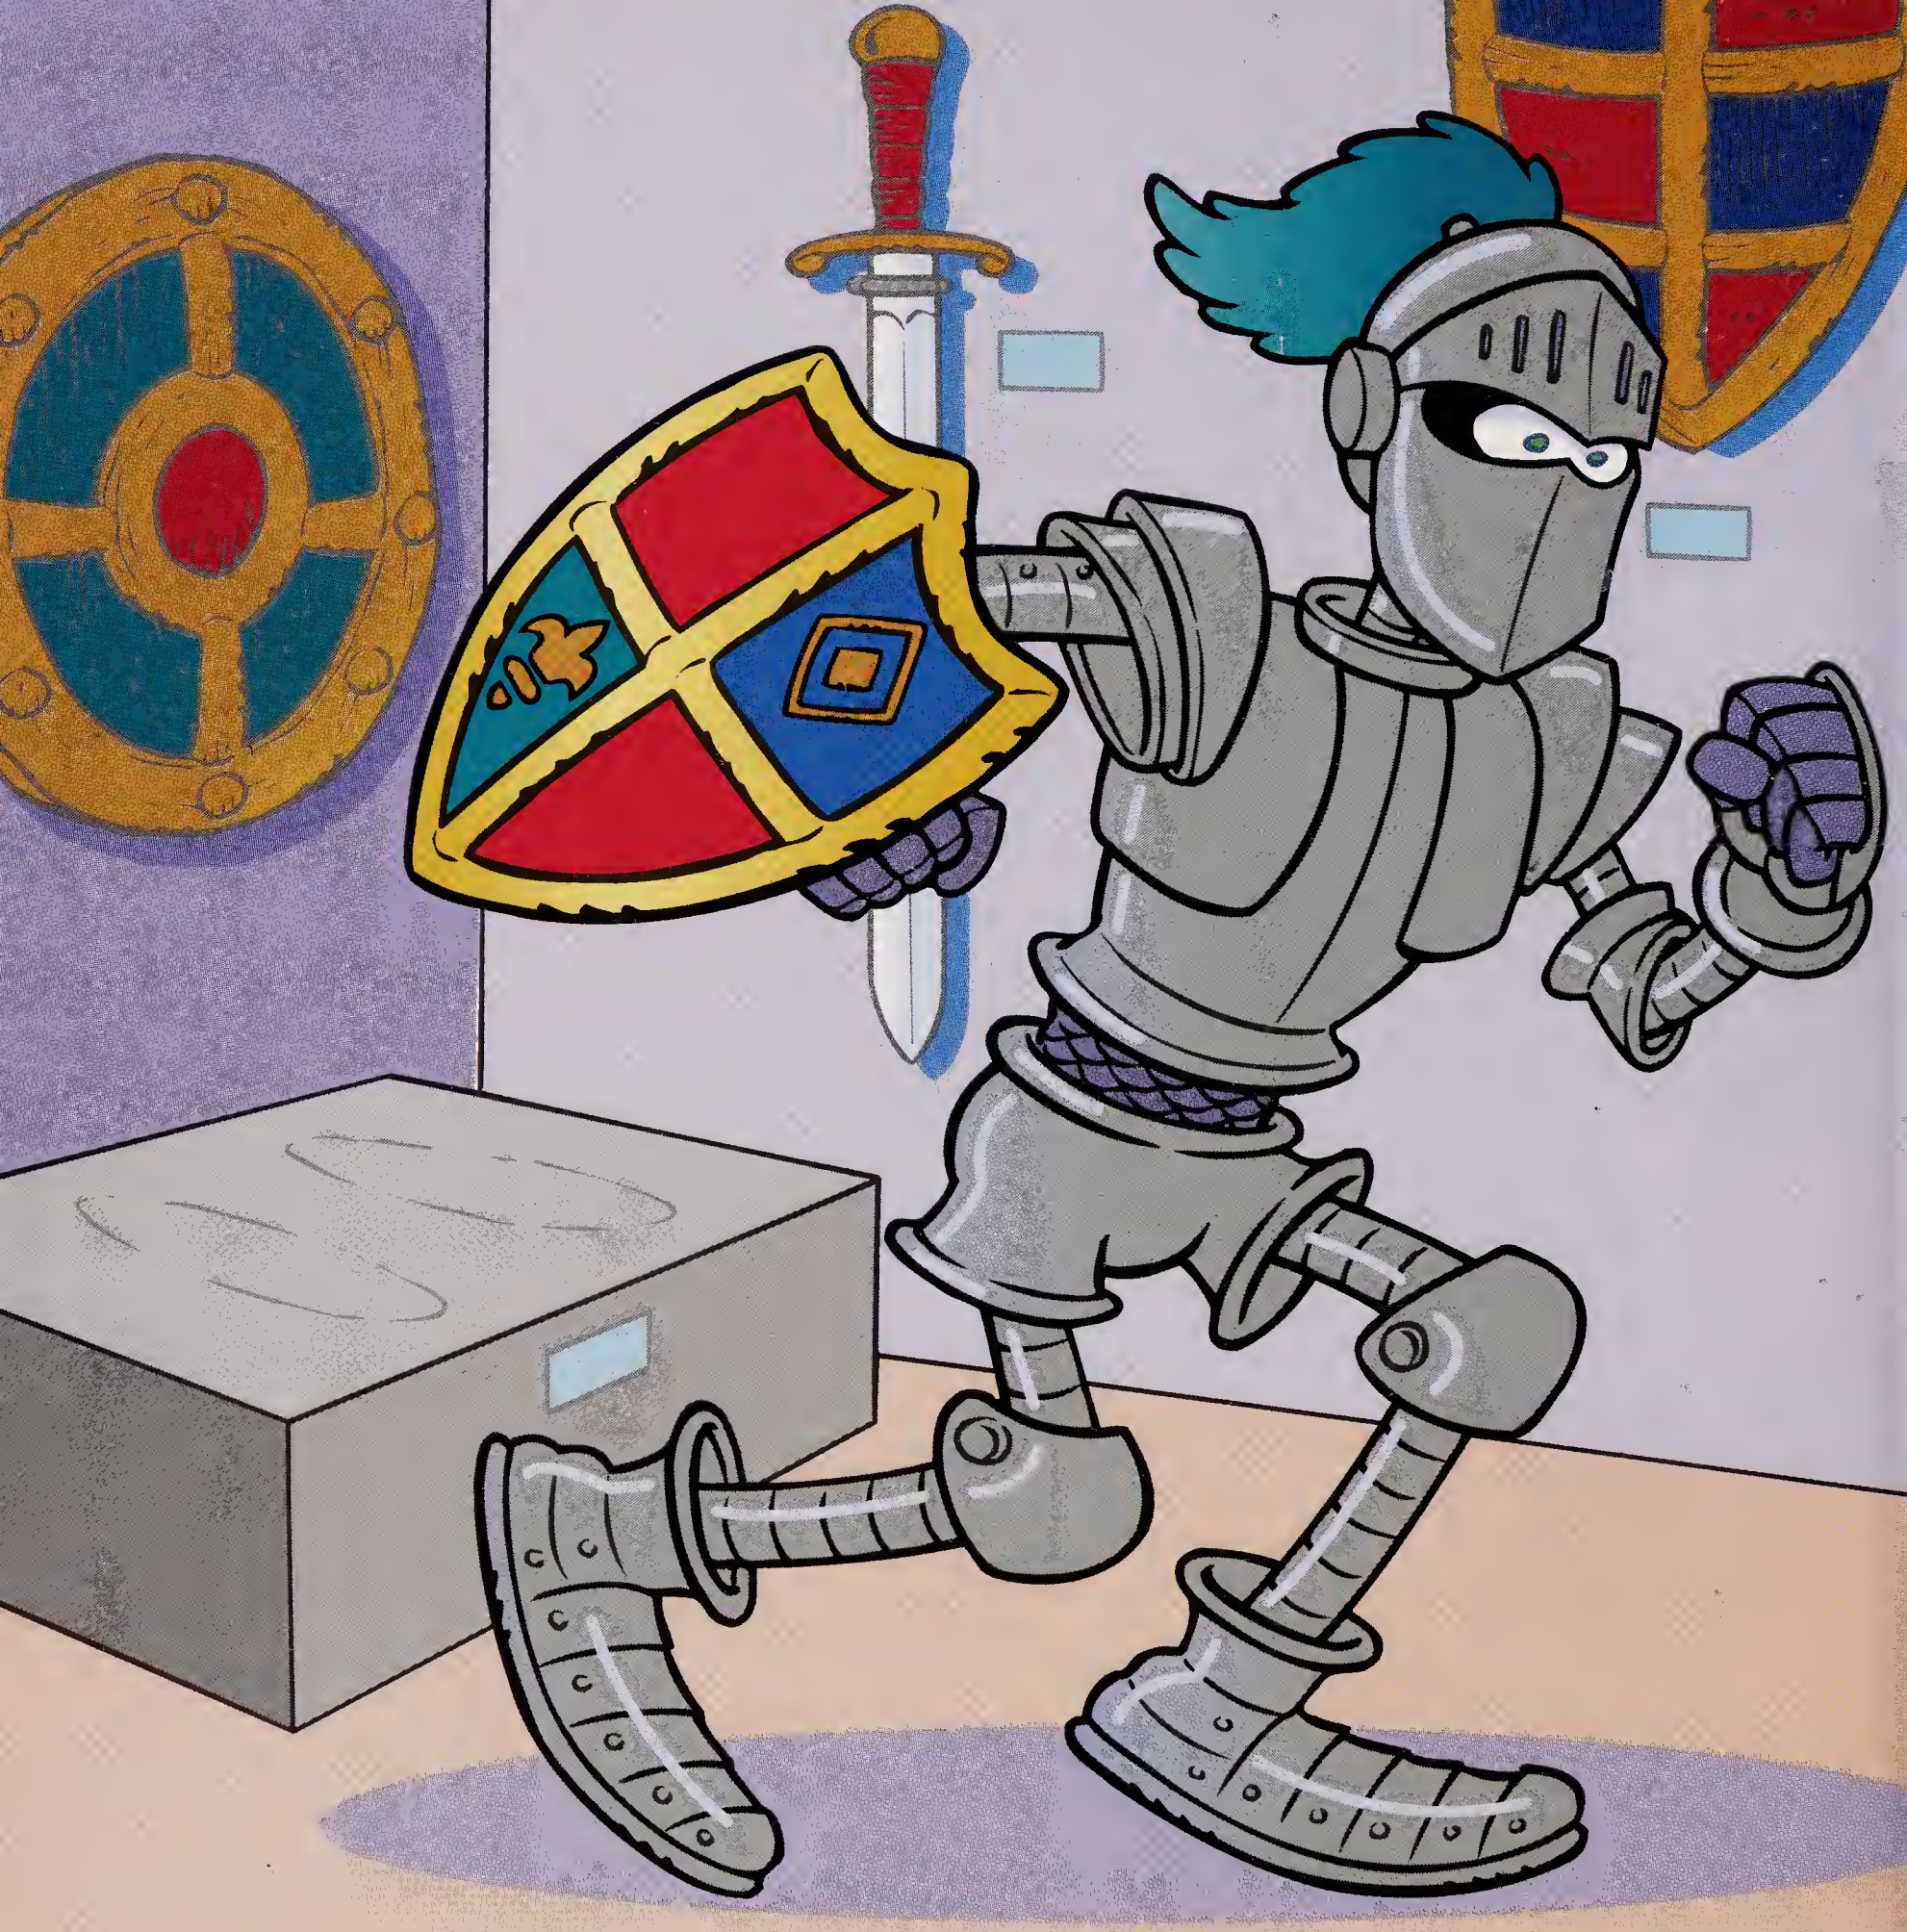
"I think we should help Mr. Mason with this monster business," says Velma. Daphne nods her head and agrees.

Fred asks Scooby and Shaggy, "Will you two stay if we promise to grab something tasty to eat later?"

"Sure, as long as it's a lot of food," Shaggy responds.

Everybody splits up to look for clues.

SCOOBY SNACKS
SD



Scooby and Shaggy walk down a hallway filled with banners and suits of armor. Shaggy says, "I wonder if they had triple-decker sandwiches in the middle ages."

Scooby sniffs around looking for sandwiches or clues, but he doesn't find either.

Shaggy hears a loud creak. "S-s-s-s-cooby," he whispers. "Did you h-h-h-h-ear that?"

"Ruh-huh!" Scooby gulps and his teeth start chattering.

Suddenly a suit of armor starts walking toward them.

Shaggy yells, "M-m-m-m-onster!" Scooby and Shaggy sprint in the other direction as fast as they can.

Scooby and Shaggy are out of breath when they find the rest of the gang.

"What's wrong?" asks Fred.

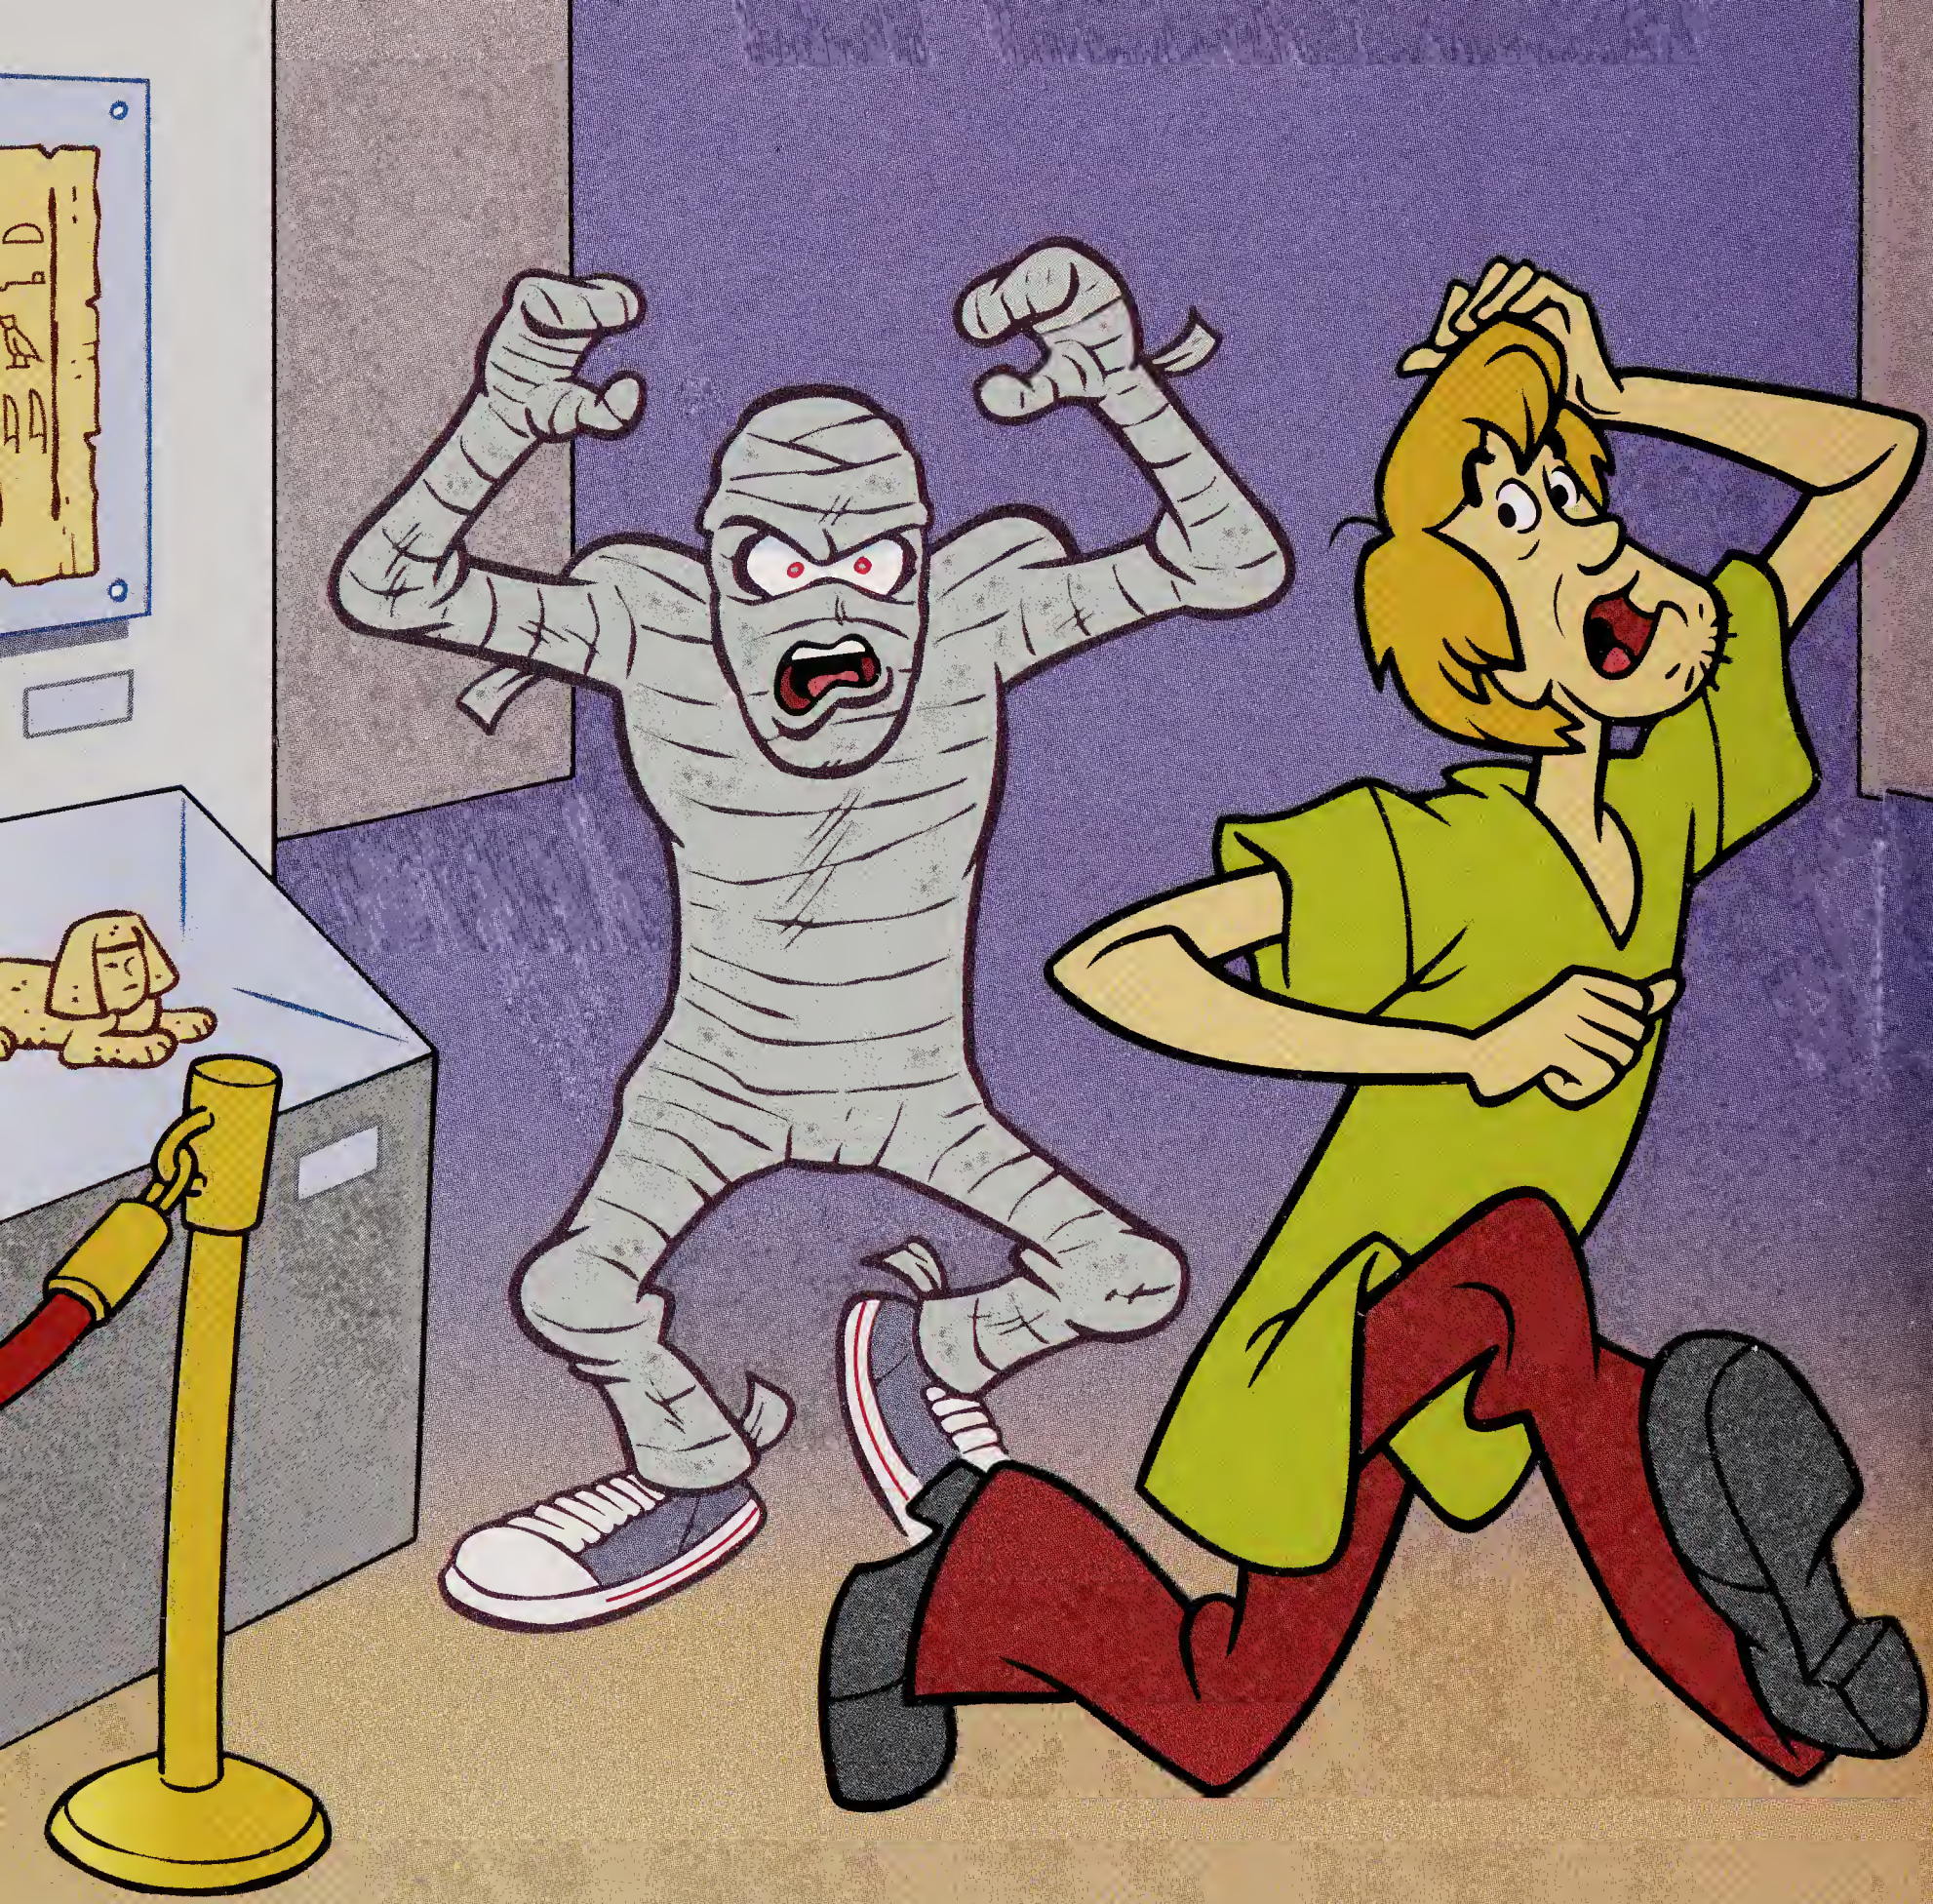
"Like," Shaggy says between breaths, "Mr. Mason was right. This place DOES have monsters."

Shaggy tells the gang what happened. Fred suggests heading to the Armor Hall to look for clues. Scooby and Shaggy are scared of going, but more scared of being left behind.

When they get to the Armor Hall, Scooby points to the suit of armor that chased them. Velma slowly opens the visor and looks inside but the armor is empty.

Daphne asks, "Are you sure this was the one that chased you?"

"I'd know those green feathers anywhere," says Shaggy.



Fred says, “Alright gang, let’s look for clues in the other Halls.”

The gang splits up again and Scooby and Shaggy head to the Hall of Pyramids. Scooby holds Shaggy’s hand, but Shaggy holds someone’s hand who is behind him.

Shaggy stops and asks, “If you’re holding my right hand, who’s holding my left hand?”

Scooby starts shaking and says, “Ru-roh.”

Shaggy looks back and sees a mummy holding his hand. Scooby and Shaggy start running with the mummy right behind them.

Scooby and Shaggy lose the mummy while running through hallways. They bump into the rest of the gang. "No more splitting up," Shaggy tells them. "We just got chased by a mummy." Fred asks Shaggy what it looked like. Shaggy replies, "He was, like, dusty, and wearing lots of bandages. His eyes were glowing red, and he, like, had sneakers on his feet."

Velma says, "I don't think mummies wear sneakers, Shaggy."

"I know I've never seen a mummy in sneakers," adds Daphne.

Fred convinces Scooby and Shaggy that they need to return to the Hall of Pyramids to investigate further.

When the gang gets to the Hall of Pyramids, they look around for any sign of the mummy.

Velma sees some footprints in the dust on the floor. "Hey, everybody! I found a clue," she shouts.

The gang gathers around Velma. "See these sneaker footprints?" Velma asks. "They're too big to belong to any of us."

Everyone bends down to get a closer look, but some of the dust gets in Scooby's nose. He sneezes and blows all the footprints away.

"Rorry!" Scooby apologizes.

Velma sighs. "Well, it was a clue."

"If we catch this mummy, or monster, or whatever it is, we can find out what's going on here," says Fred. "Scooby and Shaggy—why don't you to try to get the monster's attention and lead him back to the Main Hall. We'll wait there and set a trap."

"Like, I don't think this is such a good idea," says Shaggy.

Velma asks, "Would you do it if we promised you pepperoni-and-peanut-butter pizza and Scooby Snacks?"

Scooby exclaims, "Rokay!"

SCOOBY SNACKS

Scooby and Shaggy walk down the halls nervously whistling to get the monster's attention. They head down a hallway filled with saber-toothed tigers, mammoths, and cave people.

Shaggy looks at a pretend fire and says, "I wish we had some marshmallows, chocolate, and graham crackers!"

Suddenly, a caveman jumps out of the display. He growls and waves a big wooden club. Scooby and Shaggy take off down the hall with the caveman chasing them.

Scooby and Shaggy run toward the Main Hall. The caveman is right behind them. After Scooby and Shaggy run through the doorway to the Main Hall, the rest of the gang lifts a dividing rope and trips the caveman.

The caveman slides on the floor and drops his club. The gang quickly ties him up with the rope.

Daphne says, "I'll find Mr. Mason and tell him we trapped the monster!"

When Daphne returns with Mr. Mason, Fred pulls the beard and wig off the caveman. The "monster" is Mr. Mason's assistant, Rob!

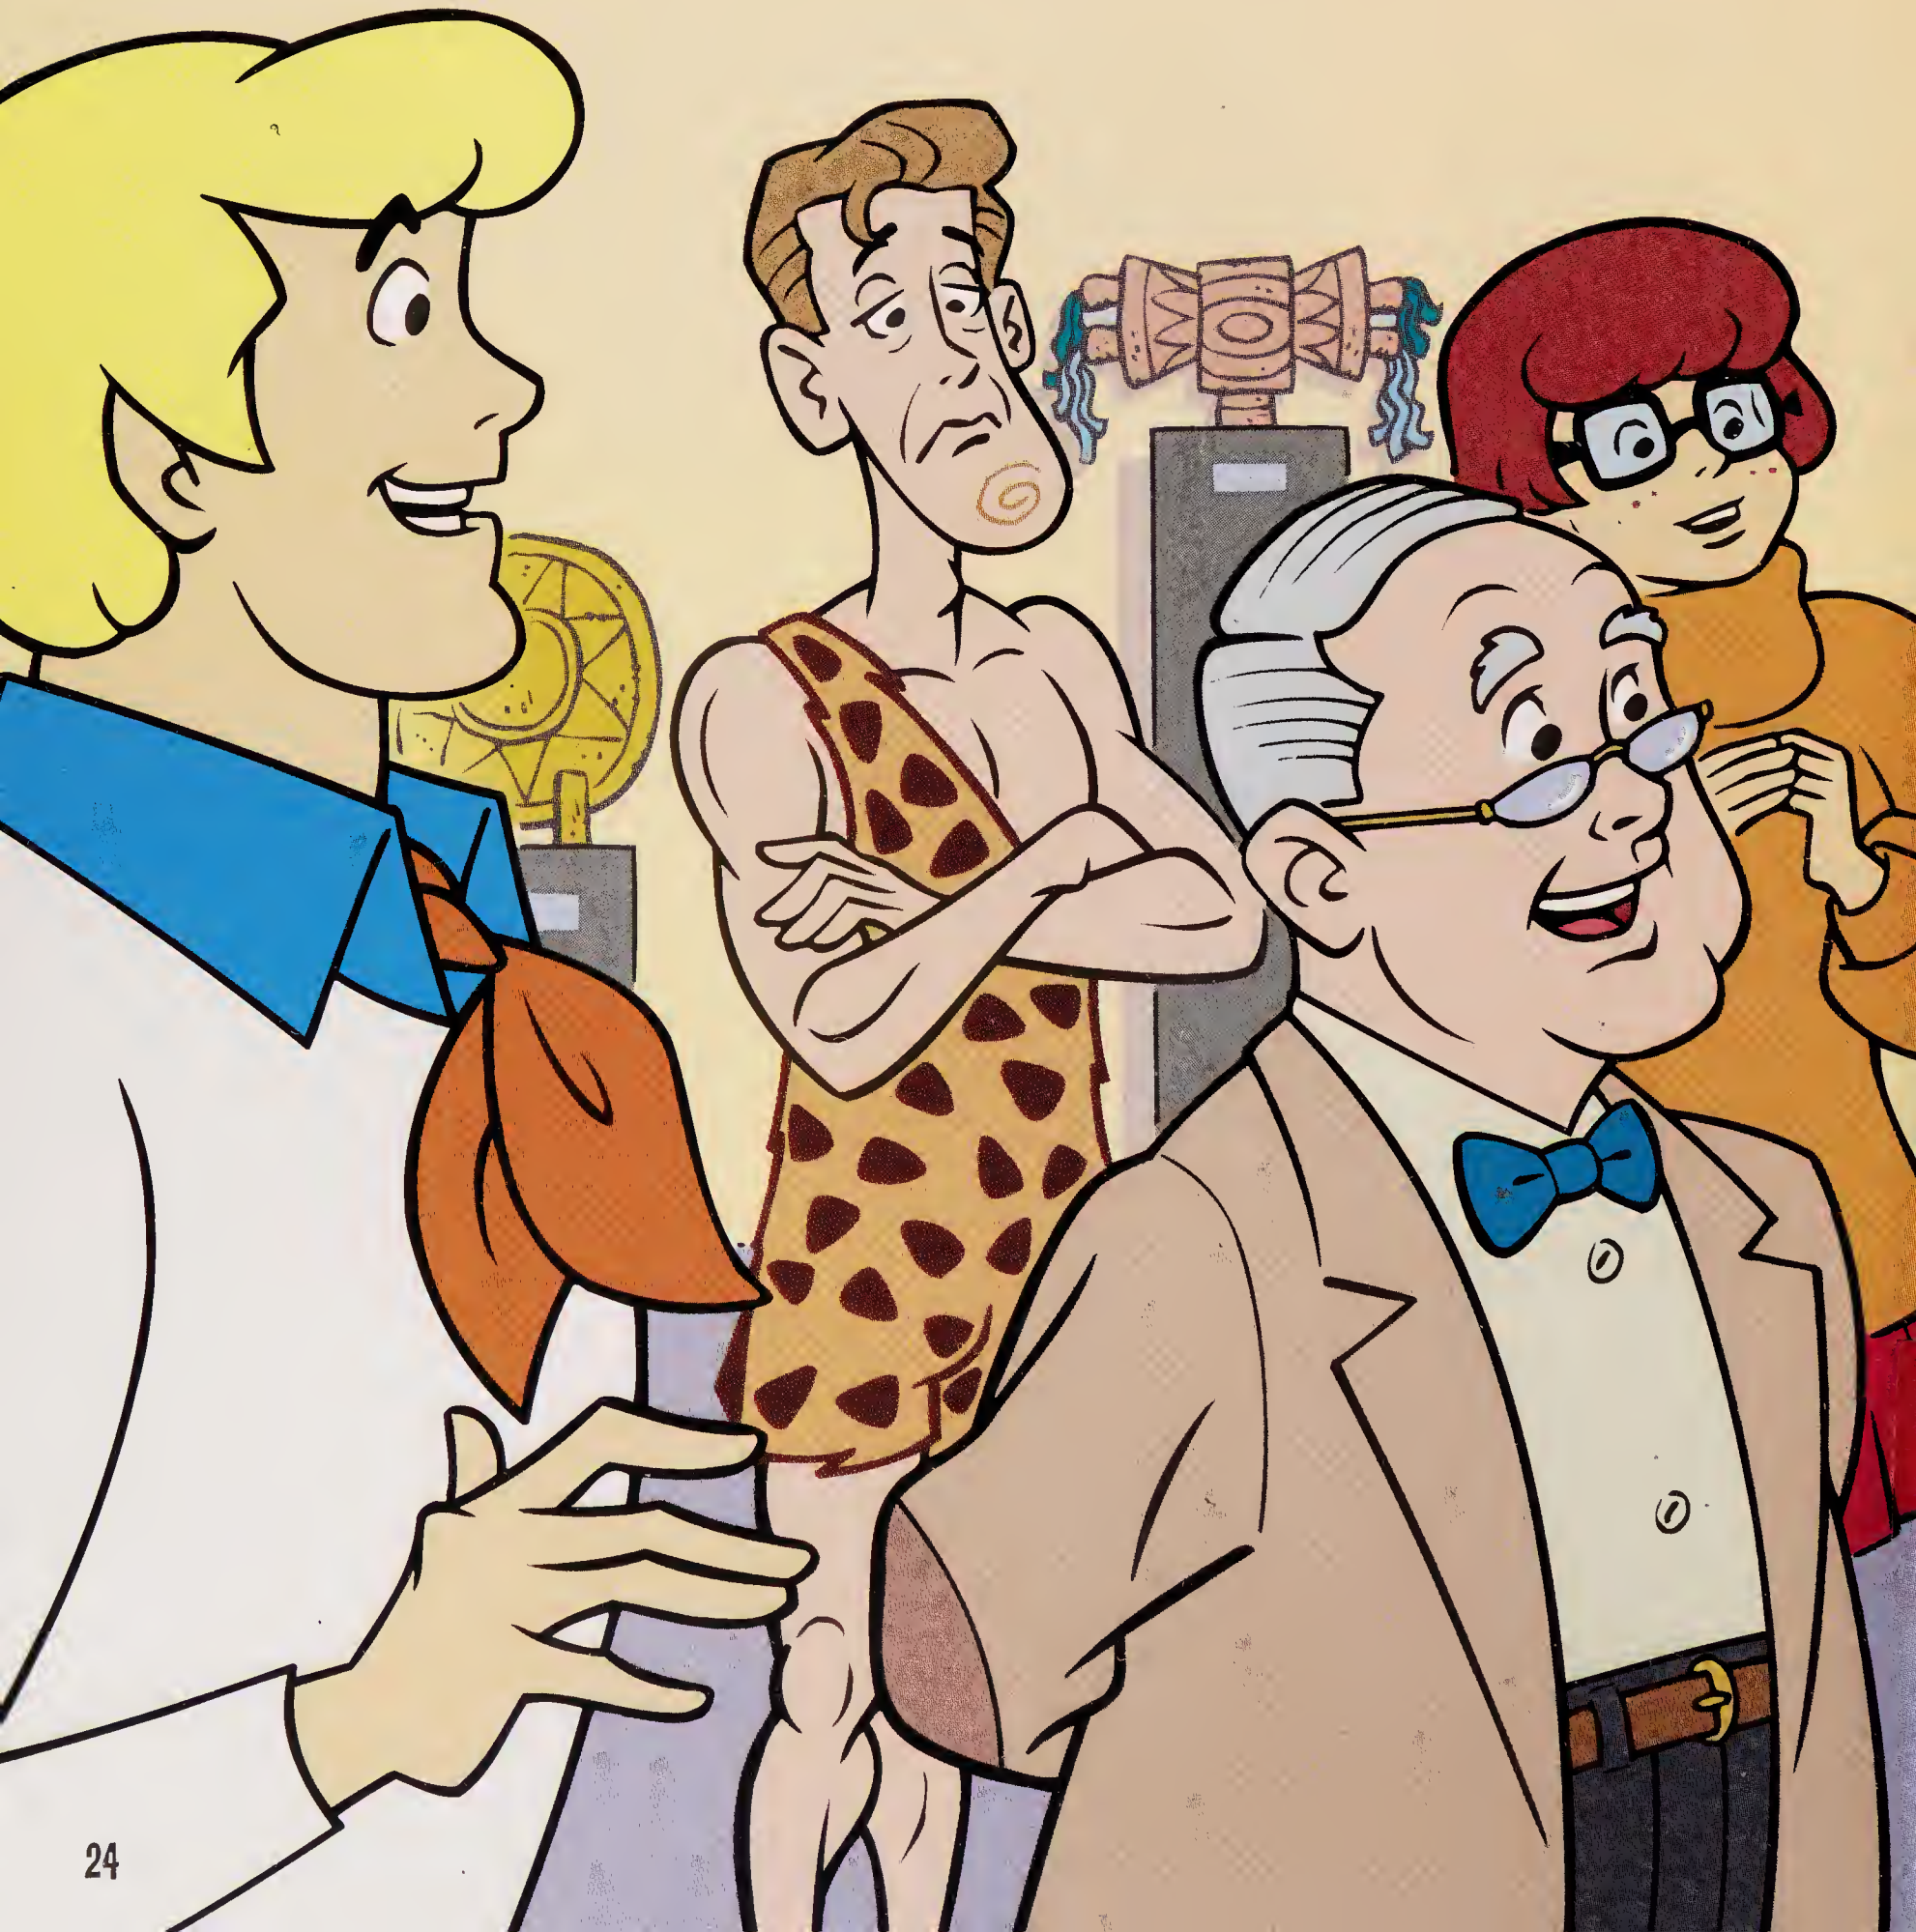
Fred asks Rob why he was dressing up as different monsters.

Rob replies, "I was sick and tired of kids with dirty hands touching my displays. If I scared everybody off, no one would touch my work again. I would have gotten away with it too, if it hadn't been for you meddling kids!"

Mr. Mason thanks Scooby and the gang for solving the museum mystery. "You kids did a terrific job," he tells them.

Velma replies, "No problem, Mr. Mason. Maybe now we can look at the museum in peace."

The gang suddenly hears a loud rumbling and growling.



Shaggy's knees start knocking together. "Maybe the museum, like, really does have monsters!" he yells.

Daphne points at Scooby and exclaims, "No, it's just Scooby's stomach. Getting chased by monsters really worked up his appetite!"

Scooby and the gang have a good laugh.
